IN FOR RECYCLING — Arcadia Councilman Charles Gilb and Mayor Jack Saelid receive nomination papers from City Clerk Christine Van Maanen as the race for city council gets under way.

Two incumbents, restaurateur among those seeking local office

Thursday was the first day candidates for Arcadia City Council could take out nomination papers, and take them out they did.

It came as no surprise when Mayor Jack Saelid and Councilman Charles E. Gilb took out papers. Both had said previously they would be candidates for re-election to a second term.

The third council member whose term expires in April, Floretta Lauber, announced Sunday that she would not seek re-election this year, giving family health problems as her reason.

Don Pellegrino, owner of Pellegrino's restaurant on South First Avenue, verified rumors that he would be a candidate when he also took out papers.

Other potential candidates are Randall L. Human, 855 W. Huntington Drive, and Paul L. Kelly, 235 W. Magna Vista Ave. Kelly, 31, is a civil engineer with Engineering

Other persons, whose names had been mentioned as possible candidates have bowed out of the race before it even started. One of these was a former councilman and mayor, Bob Arth.

"No, I don't think so," Arth said, "unless a hundred people would show up and volunteer to work for me, but I would need a lot of support before I would run again. Running a campaign takes a lot of work."

Arth has been off the council four years. According to the city charter a council member may serve only two consecutive four-year terms but nothing prevents a former member from seeking re-election after a two-year interrim.

Mrs. Doris Selmer admitted that she had been approached by a number of people as a possible candidate, but said Thursday she was not willing to give the time that is required of a good council member.

$6 million sought for Arcadia auditorium

The non-profit foundation to work with the citizens of Arcadia in an attempt to construct an auditorium is now complete and in operation.

Called the Arcadia Auditorium Foundation, it is a non-profit corporation with a charter from the state.

Donations are tax deductible and should be made to the Arcadia Auditorium Foundation, Post Office Box 60, Arcadia, Calif., 91106. Trustees are Charles E. Gilb, Gloria Horstman and Joseph Sargis.

According to a statement released by Gilb, chairman, "The net funds to be derived from activities of the foundation are being developed for the purpose of attempting to construct and maintain an auditorium or attempting to aid in the construction and maintenance of an auditorium."

He continues, "When the trustees determine that the foundation is to conclude its activity, as regards an auditorium, its remaining auditorium funds will be distributed to one or more government instrumentalities in and of the city of Arcadia, to be determined by the trustees. This will be the distribution of the foundation's remaining auditorium funds, whether or not one is constructed."

There has been some speculation as to whether the necessary $6 million can be raised for an auditorium. Gilb's statement explains how the money that is raised will be disposed of if an auditorium is not constructed.

However, the feeling is that if a portion of the necessary money is raised and if citizen enthusiasm is great enough, the remainder could go to a vote of the people in a bond election.

On another front, a facility committee headed by Mayor Jack Saelid has been appointed to determine what kind of an auditorium Arcadia really wants, the types of events to be presented and consequently the facilities, such as dressing rooms, which should or should not be included.

"We'll have to be selective," Saelid said. "Cost, in the long run, will have to be the determining factor."

Citizens put foot down on fund-raiser

It's a mouthful, and the rumor is that a song will be written about it. The word is Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium, and it's a word Arcadians will hear a lot in the next few weeks.

The Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium is the first major fund-raiser announced by Charles E. Gilb, chairman of the committee to construct an auditorium in Arcadia.

As in any walk-a-thon, people will jog or walk — briskly or slowly — after lining up sponsors to contribute money according to the distance traveled.

Rather than marching through town, citizens will display their endurance on the tracks at the high school and junior high schools.

Gilb has sent letters to 300 organizations or persons who have previously shown their interest in the auditorium project, asking them to attend a meeting in the council chambers at City Hall Monday, Jan. 30 at 7:30 p.m.

The Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium is scheduled for March 4, and Gilb urges participants to begin lining up sponsors, securing donations for each lap. Senior citizens, clubs, firemen, policemen, church groups, city employees, scout troops, property owner associations and students are all urged to participate.

Arcadia Councilman Charles Gilb reports that a constituent asked if the city were going to lower the water rates in view of all the rain we've had recently. "Hell, no," Charlie replied. "We'll have to raise them again because of all that water we have to pump off the streets."

He commented to me later, "I hope the guy didn't take me seriously."

Local control threatened, incumbents warn

Gilb would shine on 'the shadow'

It's not altogether a local issue, but Arcadia Councilman Charles E. Gilb, one of two incumbents running for re-election, says his major concern is the Southern California Association of Governments.

Made up of representatives of many cities and several Southern California counties, it is, he says, "the biggest shadow over the city." He says SCAG is impossible to deal with because it has too much power.

SCAG meetings are scheduled in the daytime when many business people cannot get away. Consequently a handful of representatives and an ever-increasing staff determine policy.

Gilb, who has served a term as mayor, says he tries to operate from a common-sense basis. At meetings, he says, "I try to make things understandable. If I don't understand something I figure other people may not either." His technique is to keep asking questions until he is sure of the answers.

Although he was lukewarm to cold on community redevelopment when he was elected four years ago, Gilb says, "I think we should keep it."

Each project should be evaluated on its own merits, he says, keeping in mind that Arcadia may have to compete with other cities. He points out what has happened in the downtown area in the past four years. "It used to be a ghost town," he says. "Now we have a parking problem."

On adopting the California Highway Patrol retirement plan for the Arcadia police, Gilb says, "We should keep our options open. I won't support the CHP blind just to get votes. I want to look at everything in an open manner."

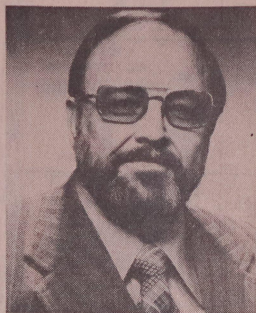

Projects for the future good of the city, in his mind, are revitalization of the El Rancho-May Company shopping complex, continued growth of the downtown area and the formation of parking districts where they are needed, both downtown and in West Arcadia.

He takes pride in excellent employee-employer relations within the city. "I like to think of it as one big family," he says. He's also proud of a vital sister city program, with almost constant communications and visits with Newcastle, Australia.

Gilb also believes the city enjoys a fine relationship with the schools, not only with administrators and teachers, but with students. "Kids can talk to us," he says. "It all helps make good citizens later."

Gilb, 53, and his wife Ruth live at 940 Singingwood Drive with their three children. They have been residents of Arcadia for nearly 20 years.

He is a business executive engaged in the nationwide distribution of produce and feels his knowledge of business and personnel management have been helpful to him as a council member.

He served four years on the Arcadia Personnel Board before being elected to the board of directors of the San Gabriel Council Boy Scouts of America. He is a member and past president of the Rancho Santa Anita Property Owners Association and a member and past president of the Arcadia Tournament of Roses Association. He was the Arcadia Chamber of Commerce's Man of the Year in 1977, and has received the Man of the Year award from the City of Hope.

Signing Gilb's nomination papers were Robert A. Huddy, Elbert E. Souders, Carol D. Papay, H. Richard Closson, B. Edward Harver, Gloria J. Horstman, Wilfred J. Schmitt, H. Randall Stoke, James R. Helms Jr. and Raymond Godfrey.

Others were Alfred R. Coke, Martin J. Yurich, John Eric Longden, Joseph E. Sargis, Peter J. Pitchess, Carol G. Libby, Paul G. Johnk, Raymond M. Rogers, Edward L. Butterworth and Jeanne R. Saunders.

More were Jean S. Livingston, Don W. Hage, Robert J. Considine, C. Robert Arth, LeRoy K. Speirs, William E. Kuyper, Floretta K. Lauber, Alton E. Scott, Myree M. Gudas and Raymond D. Winn.

Today the Arcadia Tribune begins a series of profiles of the nine candidates for three seats on the Arcadia City Council.

There has been some jockeying for position, with some candidates apparently feeling that "lost is best." With this in mind, the Tribune has chosen to start the series with the two incumbents, Mayor Jack Saelid and Councilman Charles Gilb, since they have the built-in advantage of their incumbencies.

The remaining seven candidates will be presented in alphabetical order, which, short of drawing straws, a difficult procedure, appears to be the fairest way to handle the matter.

Mayor still cool on redevelopment

Mayor Jack Saelid, one of two incumbents seeking re-election to the Arcadia City Council, believes the major issue facing the people is local control of government.

"It isn't just the Jarvis-Gann property tax amendment," he says. "It is the state which is requiring us to revise the housing element in our general plan."

"More than that, it is the Southern California Association of Governments, the creature of the cities, which is more and more taking over control of local government."

Currently SCAG has the power to determine if the cities meet certain criteria and to evaluate proposals for funding. Eventually, Saelid says, this means that SCAG will have the power of enforcement. SCAG will be a fact of life.

Another big concern in Saelid's mind is the Arcadia of the future. He believes the city currently has a good mix of residential, commercial and industrial use and that present zoning is ample to build up what exists.

He believes it is important to maintain the residential quality of the city, which may be difficult if the tax structure changes to put more emphasis on sales tax rather than property tax. He intends to find out during this campaign if the voters feel as he does.

Saelid, four years ago, was an adamant foe of community redevelopment. "My feelings are unchanged," he says. "I feel we could accomplish the same goals without the Arcadia Redevelopment Agency. On the other hand, the ARA offers an opportunity to make things happen faster."

He says he will try to give the electorate a balance sheet, pro and con, on redevelopment. "If, in the campaign, I see that a majority want it, I would try to establish a master plan for downtown," he says.

Aware that the Arcadia Police Relief Association would like to elect candidates who favor the California Highway Patrol's retirement plan, Saelid says simply, "It's not warranted for Arcadia. Our present retirement plan is good. In fact," he says, "I believe a lot of citizens consider it an affront to be told that a man of 50 is 'over the hill.' He is pleased with the present fiscal policy of the city. "By and large we have done well with our operating budget and our use of manpower," he says, adding that the use of outside funding for day-to-day expenditures scares him.

He believes people should have free access to government, that they shouldn't be afraid to address their city council. Saelid says as presiding officer of the council he has tried to listen carefully to what they have to say and to offer help and cooperation whenever possible.

A resident of 821 Balboa Drive, Saelid, 42, is an electronic engineer with Xerox. He and his wife Barbara have been Arcadia residents since 1961. They have two children, Jeffrey, 13, and Lisa, 8.

He is or has been active in PTA, Cub Scouts, the Santa Anita Village Association, and in numerous city-affiliated commissions and organizations.

The 30 people who signed his nomination paper included Robert S. Campbell, Davis S. Hannah, Richard F. Young, Richard W. John, Conrad T. Reibold, Robert L. Cheney, Eugene R. Wilson, David W. Powell, James E. Brewer and Thomas J. Delahouke.

Others were John E. Abercrombie Jr., David C. Cashion, F.R. Jahnke, L.T. Papp, Irwin Fred Sommers, Leonard J. Churchman, James P. Kennedy, Marilyn Lee Daleo, Kathleen Henrich, Lewis H.V. May, Anne P. Knoll, Alton E. Scott, Joseph E. Spurgeon and Fred G. Kennedy.

More were Richard Closson, Kelvin C. Mason, Margaret E. Garlough, John Joseph, Phillip H. Scott and Gerald J. Murray Jr.

3 seats vacant

Council candidates file by the dozen

The Arcadia City Council race is beginning to shape up like the marathon of 1974 in which there were 14 candidates for three seats.

With a week yet to go until filing closes, a dozen candidates have announced their intentions. Nomination papers have been taken out this week by Tom Matthews, 442 W. Norman Ave.; Herbert (Jerry) Melton, 136 W. Norman Ave., and George Fasching, 322 W. Colorado Blvd.

The nine others who had previously taken out papers include two incumbents, Charles E. Gilb and Jack Saelid. The third council member whose term expires, Floretta Lauber, has announced she will not be a candidate for re-election.

Taking out papers and actually filing them are two different matters. Before the noon deadline on Feb. 2, candidates must secure the signatures of not less than 20 nor more than 30 registered voters in the city. Whoever collects the signatures, whether the candidate or a campaign worker, must have the nomination papers notarized.

The statement must sign a candidate that he or she will serve if elected and must file a full statement of his financial interests and business and real property interests if they are within two miles of Arcadia.

The election this year is somewhat different than the one four years ago when Saelid, Gilb and Mrs. Lauber were elected from a field of 14 candidates.

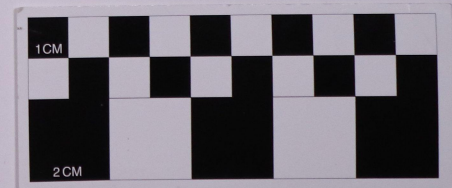

At that time the three incumbents, Don Hage, Bob Arth and Ed Butterworth, had to step down according to a provision of the city charter which permits a council member to serve only two consecutive four-year terms.

That meant all three seats were up for grabs. Two years ago Jim Helms had served two terms and Dr. Alton Scott decided not to run for re-election, leaving two vacancies which were filled by Dave Parry and Bob Margett.

This year the two incumbents, Gilb and Saelid, who have good name recognition in the community, can expect to have a fair edge over the other candidates.

The odds are against an upset, but Arcadians can expect to have a big field from which to choose.

OFF AND RUNNING — Setting the pace for potential joggers in the March 4 Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium is David Albright, at left, a student at Camino Grove Elementary School. Not far behind are Susan Bade, First Avenue

Junior High School; Marcel Steiner, AFS student at the high school; and John Sonnhalter, principal at Foothills Junior High School. People at all age levels are urged to walk or jog for the auditorium fund.

Countdown right on track for March Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium

With the Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium still 10 days away, Elb Souders, chairman, reports that enthusiasm is building rapidly. "This is going to be quite a community gathering," says Souders, referring to the events scheduled Saturday, March 4, from 9 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

There is support from the city, schools, businesses, civic and social groups and countless individuals, according to the chairman. "Several friendly challenges are brewing as people unite in their desire to raise funds for an Arcadia auditorium," Souders says.

In addition to a lot of good exercise for participants, the morning's activities for spectators will include shows by several performing groups and rides in hot air balloons at $2 per person. All proceeds from the rides will go to the auditorium fund, compliments of Golden Bear Enterprises.

"Come for breakfast, and stay for lunch," is the invitation from refreshment co-chairmen Martha Bermingham and Barbara Whiteside. Sales at the snack stand definitely will add to the auditorium proceeds since most food items are being donated by local businesses.

The participants walking, jogging or running around the high school track from 9:30 to 10:30 or 11 a.m. to noon will be those who are now signing up sponsors for a per lap or flat rate donation toward an auditorium. One lap around the track is approximately a quarter mile, according to Dick Cordano who is arranging the March 4 activities with the help of Dan Anderson. Lap counters will be provided.

The forms used to enlist sponsors are available through March 3 at the Arcadia Chamber of Commerce, local fire stations and all public school offices. Suggested sponsors for would-be participants are relatives, neighbors and other friends.

Numerous organizations in the community are sponsoring one or more of their members, including PTA's, senior citizen clubs, real estate agents, school organizations and city departments.

Prizes for participants will be awarded after sponsor pledges are billed and received by Joe Sargis, treasurer of the Arcadia Auditorium Foundation.

MORNING WORKOUT — Picking up momentum for the big event, the Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium fund-raiser on Saturday, March 4, are the Tribune's own good sport, Catherine Mundy, and her petite pre-school pacer, Cindy Bridgland of East Arthur Avenue. "As you can see, everybody's getting in the act," beamed Catherine. "I carry my sponsor sheet wherever I go, and it's almost filled."

RAIN, RAIN, GO AWAY — Charles E. Gilb, president of the Arcadia Auditorium Foundation, faces the realization that the Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium, planned for yesterday at the Arcadia High School track, had to be postponed. It has been rescheduled for March 11.

Rain drowns Jog-A-Walk; rescheduled for March 11

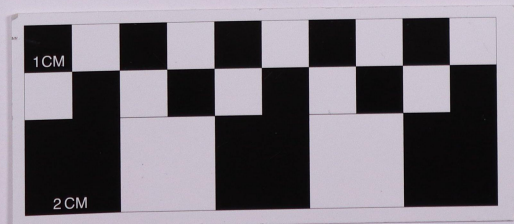

The Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium, originally scheduled for March 4, has been postponed for one week. Chairman Elb Souders cites the record-breaking storm and the condition of the track as factors leading to the postponement decision.

"We look forward to clear skies and a great auditorium fund-raiser at the Arcadia High track on March 11," says Souders. "We will begin at 9 a.m. and all facets of the outstanding program will remain the same, including the appearance of well-known sports figures."

Persons for whom the March 11 date creates a conflicts are requested to give their sponsor sheet to a friend to complete the running of the laps for them.

"This necessary postponement will provide everyone with the opportunity to obtain more sponsors," suggests Souders. He adds that sponsors will be billed for their pledges following the March 11 Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium, and indicated that it is not necessary for a sponsor to make a cash contribution at the time of a pledge to a participant.

Crowded election grindsto a close

If money's helpful, Gilb has the edge

It isn't always true that the political candidate who spends the most money is automatically elected. It is true, though, that money helps.

In that case, Arcadia City Council incumbent Charles Gilb has had far more help than any of the other eight candidates in the race.

All candidates are required to file three statements of campaign receipts and expenditures with the city clerk. Two of these are now on file, the second one dated the end of March. The third one won't be due until the middle of June, long after the April 11 election is history.

Candidates who spend no more than $200 total are not required to file itemized statements. Four of the candidates, Charles Chivetta, Johanna Hofer, Robert Humble and Jerry Melton fall in this category.

Gilb has raised far and away the biggest war chest, with $12,358.11 contributed to date. Candidates are required to list the names only of people who contribute $50 or more. Gilb lists numerous $50 and $100 contributions by local supporters. In addition he has received tremendous financial support from people in the produce industry.

As of March 27, his committee had spent only $4,353.27. Gilb says funds not expended will be contributed to a charitable cause, probably the non-profit Arcadia Auditorium Foundation of which he is chairman.

If contributions to Gilb's campaign were not so generous, the contributions to Mayor Jack Saeld's fund would look very respectable. His supporters to date have raised $4,056.92, of which $227.04 was in non-monetary contributions. His expenditures so far have been only $1,527.76.

As in the election race itself, Don Pellegrino and Bill Kuyper are running neck and neck in the amount of the contributions they have received.

Kuyper had received $2,336 and had spent, as of the end of March, only $227.07. In the same period Pellegrino had received $2,319.33 and had spent $2,319.35.

When the June accounting comes around, Pellegrino will undoubtedly have added considerably to this statement of contributions. He has relied heavily on advertisements paid for by his supporters. Because the cost is under the $50 limit, they will be accounted for in the final totals.

The only other candidate whose contributions and expenditures have been over the $200 limit is George Fasching. His statement of March 27 shows contributions received of $254 and outstanding debts of $39.48.

Animal control problems: pound site, time, money

By STEVE JOHNSTON
Staff Writer

Representatives from nine San Gabriel Valley cities faced with termination of animal control services agreed Wednesday to form three committees to look into solutions to the dilemma.

The representatives, primarily city managers from the affected cities, will meet again on April 19 in a private session to report their findings.

Wednesday's meeting, called by Karl Koski, Temple City city manager and Lyle Alberg, Arcadia city manager, was held in response to a March 27 announcement by the San Gabriel Valley Humane Society that it would discontinue animal shelter services as of June 30.

Cities affected by the termination are Alhambra, Duarte, Temple City, Covina, Glendora, Monterey Park, San Gabriel, Arcadia and West Covina.

One of the committees formed Wednesday will look into the feasibility of using the Los Angeles County shelter in Baldwin Park. A second committee will assess the cost of refurbishing the 40-year-old San Gabriel Humane Society facility.

A third committee will be responsible for gathering general data on animal shelters, including the potential cost of building a new facility.

Animal shelter services will be available to the nine cities after June 30 on an interim month-to-month basis, but one city representative noted that the cost to the cities during that period would likely increase by as much as 100 percent.

In deliberations with the county, the city managers' committee will be faced with a county policy requiring control over both animal shelter services and animal control personnel.

Many of the cities hit by termination of the San Gabriel unit have used that facility only to shelter animals, while providing their own animal control personnel and equipment.

Some representatives at the meeting contended that city personnel were likely to be more responsive than county personnel. The committee formed on Wednesday will determine whether the county is willing to alter its control policy. The committee will also look into the cost of such services.

City Manager Koski pointed out that alternatives for the cities will probably boil down either to putting together an agreement with the county or jointly acquiring or building another facility.

The second committee formed on Wednesday will consider the cost of bringing the current San Gabriel facility up to standard, including the possibility of acquiring adjacent land area.

San Gabriel City manager Bob Clute noted that a joint-powers agreement among the cities would have the advantage of "controlling your own destiny." Monrovia City Manager But Ovrom added that most of the cities represented would have to join such an agreement to make it economically feasible. "With only three or four cities you wouldn't have the economy of size to make it work," he said.

Monrovia, with a county contract, is not directly affected by the closing of the San Gabriel facility, but Ovrom said Monrovia was still interested in working with the other cities to find a solution to the problem.

The San Gabriel unit has been subjected to widespread criticism since February when a group of South Pasadena residents opposed a changeover from use of the Pasadena animal shelter to the San Gabriel facility.

A letter from Phillip E. Steward, field investigator for the national Humane Society in Washington, D.C. to Joan Coleman, director of the San Gabriel shelter said, "I was disgusted at the conditions of your shelter, the attitudes of some of your staff members and acts of cruelty being perpetuated upon animals entrusted to your care."

Name recognition may decide winners

By HELEN O. SCHRADER
Editor

With few issues to catch the fancy of the voters, the City Council race in Arcadia has boiled down to a battle of personalities and publicity.

The nine candidates for three positions on the council can, at this point, be divided into two groups — those who have a reasonable chance of being elected and those who would require at least a minor miracle.

Two of the candidates, Mayor Jack Saeld and Councilman Charles Gilb, have the advantage of their incumbency. The real race is for the seat being vacated by Councilwoman Ploretta Leuber, who has chosen not to run for re-election because of family health problems.

Gilb, who is in the wholesale produce business in Los Angeles, is expected to be a shoo-in. He is probably best known throughout the community of all the candidates. That doesn't prevent him from running scared. He has conducted an intensive campaign with public appearances and with brochures and advertisements.

Saeld may have a little more trouble garnering votes than Gilb. His views against redevelopment are well known, views which are not shared by the majority of candidates this year, and he is thought to favor homeowners over the business community. Saeld is an engineer and an executive with the Xerox company.

Probably the hardest-working of all the candidates, and the one likely to pick up a lot of the marbles, is Don Pellegrino, owner of the First Avenue restaurant which bears his name. He is counting on his local business experience and his ability to listen to carry him to victory.

Running neck and neck with Pellegrino is Bill Kuyper, a civil engineer. Kuyper has based his campaign on his 14 years as a member of the Arcadia Planning Commission. He says this experience has given him an intimate knowledge of land use and zoning problems in the entire city. Although he has been a resident of Arcadia for more than 20 years, in both the north and south parts of town, he probably will have more trouble with name recognition than Pellegrino.

Name recognition could well play a role in the candidacy of George Fasching, who owns a service station and a car wash in Arcadia, both bearing his name. Like Pellegrino, he believes it is time to elect a local businessman to the council. He has conducted a colorful campaign.

Although they wouldn't admit it, the other four candidates probably don't really expect to end up in the winners' circle. However they all say they have enjoyed the race and have learned a great deal from the experience.

Adding spice to the campaign with their comments have been Charles Chivetta and Johanna Hofer. Chivetta, a planning director with the city of Lakewood, has enjoyed taking potshots at the incumbent and their pet projects. While most of the other candidates favor construction, one way or another, of a civic auditorium, Chivetta says what is really needed is a community service center. He wants to see change, calling the desire to build Arcadia as it is "convoluted logic."

Mrs. Hofer, who bills herself as a writer, patriot and environmentalist, for several years has provided the loyal opposition at both school board and council meetings. She would like to see the city develop a solar energy policy and would put redevelopment to a vote of the people.

Jerry Melton, for 14 years a deputy sheriff with Los Angeles County, is a comparative newcomer to Arcadia. He and his family, which includes 13 children, moved to the city three and a half years ago because they wanted to live in a community with high standards and good schools. As a fairly new resident, he will have trouble with name recognition, but he is anxious to serve the community in some fashion.

Robert Humble, at 21, is by far the youngest candidate. A student at Cal Poly Pomona, he calls the council race "a great learning experience" for him. He has done a little door-to-door campaigning but between school and a job, he hasn't had much time. He claims the traits needed by a council member are creativity and the ability to think problems through. These traits he says he has.

The election is Tuesday and City Clerk Christine Van Maanen said she would go out on a limb and guess that there would be a 30 per cent turnout of the 27,477 registered voters in the city.

There are 20 consolidated precincts and she suggests voters check their sample ballots for their polling places because they are not all in the usual locations.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Votes will be tallied at the City Hall, 240 W. Huntington Drive.

'Slam-Bang' Speaker

Gilb Guest At Tulelake

TULELAKE — Some 180 farmers and their wives gathered in Tulelake Thursday night for the annual Tulelake Growers Association Banquet.

The keynote speaker, Charles Gilb of Los Angeles, got a warm response from the crowd in a speech that touched on agribusiness, politics and American society.

Gilb is the produce executive and president of Charles E. Gilb Co., a nationwide distributor of fruits and vegetables. Gilb was mayor of Arcadia Calif. from 1975 to 1976. He was co-founder of Progressive Produce Co., an onion and potato jobbing and packing operation.

He is a member of the board of directors of the Potato Growers Association of California.

Gilb warned the audience at the outset of his talk, "I'm one of those slam-bang speakers. I say what I think. Some people don't like it, but I say what I think."

Referring to a trip to Europe, he said he returned with the opinion the United States is the "best fed country in the world. In Russia they have worms in the apples, and in Yugoslavia the produce breaks down after two or three days."

He touched on the subject of farm prices, saying, "There's a lot of money around. On one day at Santa Anita racetrack, 49,000 people bet $3 million."

"Farmers have to get up and say things cost this much, or else they'll eliminate everybody. There were 18 jobbers in Los Angeles. Now there are seven."

"We've got to educate the housewife. Of the items in chain stores, 92 percent don't sell one case a week. Of the 200 Alpha Beta stores in Los Angeles, 70 lose money, 50 or 60 break even, and the rest pay the way for the others."

Gilb said he feels the United States is getting into serious trouble. "People are living on credit cards. At the terminal market, the best business days are paydays. We need places like Tulelake and Klamath Falls to help regain the sanity we've got to have in this nation."

Recalling his experiences in government, he said, "The first thing a government employee should know is how to make out a payroll. A government leader is only as strong as his advisors, and the president and governor could use some new advisors."

In closing he pointed out if the people in the room had their whole lives to live over again, "the majority of the people would settle right here."

Preceding Gilb's talk, the new association president,

Craig Bettendorf, gave Ellis Farias, the outgoing president, a tape player/radio as a token of appreciation.

Mary Rogers, retiring association secretary, received a charm bracelet as a memento from the association. Mrs. Rogers is beginning her retirement by running for a seat on the Tulelake City Council.

Values On Crop Land Generally Down In County

Crop land assessment values for 1978-79 are generally down from 1977-78, according to James Grimes, Klamath County assessor.

However, that's not the case in the Shasta View Irrigation District where water charges went down, from the former $22 per acre to about $19. That factor resulted in the farm use value going up on the basis of net income per acre, according to Grimes.

He said most grazing land assessments went up, since the former figure of $6 per animal unit month has been increased to $8 aum.

The tax roll, which will be reflected in tax bills that become due in October, was set by the assessor's office and adopted by both the five-member Farm Use Advisory Committee and the Klamath County Board of Equalization, Grimes said.

There are 13 separate assessment areas, including countywide dry land and swamp land categories. Within the areas there are a variety of classes of land, ranging from a high of Class I to a low of Class VIII, the latter being for swampland.

Assessments listed by Grimes include:

Area 50, Merrill-Malin — Class I land is listed as having a market value of $1,150 per acre and a farm use value, the amount the farmer is to be assessed, of $640. Class I-S, $1,150 and $640; Class II, $1,040 and $550; Class III, $625 and $340; Class IV, $300 and $95; Class V, $250 and $25; Class VI, $160 and $50; Class VII, $200 and $7.

Area 55, Malin-Shasta View — Class I, $1,100 and $675; Class II, $800 and $585; Class III, $500 and $270; Class IV, $275 and $95; Class V, $200 and $25; Class VI, $160 and $50; Class VII, $150 and $7.

Area 52, Poe Valley — Class I, $1,000 and $640; Class I-S, $1,000 and $640; Class II, $850 and $550; Class III, $650 and $340; Class IV, $275 and $95; Class V, $200 and $25; Class VI, $160 and $50; Class VII, $220 and $7.

Voters invited to Gilb re-election reception

Residents of Arcadia are invited to meet with Councilman Charles E. Gilb, candidate for re-election to Arcadia City Council, at an upcoming reception.

The reception is planned for Thursday, March 16, 8 to 9:30 p.m., at the Randall Stoke home, 1040 Hampton Road, Arcadia.

James R. Helms Jr., attorney and former mayor, is serving as chairman of the Citizens to Re-Elect Charles E. Gilb Campaign Committee. "Charles' outstanding leadership and total commitment to our community are extremely important attributes to good government here," says Helms.

Gilb has served as mayor and liaison to all city boards and commissions during his term on City Council. Prior to his 1974 election, he was chairman of the Personnel Board.

He is active in a number of local organizations, including the San Gabriel Valley Council, Boy Scouts of America, of which he is vice-president. Gilb is a past president of the Arcadia Tournament of Roses Association and the Rancho Santa Anita Property owners.

In 1977 Gilb received the Arcadia Citizen of the Year and Industry Education Council Awards. City of Hope named him Man of the Year in 1969.

"My goals as a councilman and candidate for re-election are basic ones," expresses Gilb. He pledges continued attention to the needs of all citizens, including proper provision for cultural and recreational opportunities and a healthy business community.

Gilb emphasizes that responsible control over the city budget and capital projects is a top priority for him as a councilman representing local taxpayers. He is a firm believer in devoting the necessary time to develop and maintain good city employer-employee relationships.

"Dependable service to the public is the business of the city," says Gilb.

As a councilman Gilb represents Arcadia's interests outside of the community, too. He is an officer of the National Municipal League and an executive board member of the Independent Cities Association.

In his capacity as chairman of the City Selection Committee of the League of California Cities Gilb works with mayors and councilmen of 81 cities in Los Angeles County, with responsibilities affecting rapid transit and air quality.

Charles and his wife, Ruth, and their three children have made their home in Arcadia for 19 years.

Chief Joseph T. Rouzan
Compton Chief of Police

Dear Chief Rouzan:

Last evening, it was my pleasure to be among the rooters of Arcadia High School attending the CIF playoffs at Compton High School. The fact that Arcadia won is of great jubilation to us, but is not the purpose of this letter.

I could not excuse myself if I did not send compliments to the officers of the Compton Police Department. There were 24 buses in our convoy, and the manner in which we were courteously dispatched to and from the stadium deserves our plaudits.

Every officer that we came in contact with was courteous, diligent and alert. This message was heard over and over again by all those Arcadians attending the game. It was the topic of conversation by everyone as the buses were unloading upon our return to Arcadia.

Your Department is to be congratulated for a job well done. You have our deepest respect and gratitude.

Kindest personal regards,

Gilb tops campaign spending; Pellegrino, Kuyper followers

Arcadia City Councilman Charles E. Gilb raised $14,451 in his recent bid for re-election — far and away more than his rivals — according to records filed with the city clerk's office.

Although Gilb won re-election by finishing second in the April 11 balloting, former Mayor Jack Saelid garnered more votes while receiving approximately one-third as much money. Saelid, a Xerox Corp. engineer, spent all of the $4,978 he received in campaign contributions.

Conversely, Gilb did not spend all of his contributions, and has $3,170 in surplus campaign funds. Gilb began the 1978 campaign with $894 carried over from a previous election victory. The councilman said last week that he intends to donate all of the surplus money to a local charity or a non-profit foundation.

Local restaurant owner Donald Pellegrino, in his first try for legislative office, raised $3,419, second only to Gilb. Pellegrino won a seat on the council as the third-highest vote-getter.

William E. Kuyper, who finished fourth in the race, raised $3,971 in a losing effort. Kuyper, a construction engineer, spent all of the campaign funds.

George W. Fasching, the fifth place finisher, who openly opposed Proposition 13, received $1,252 in contributions. Fasching, however, spent more than twice what he received in contributions, and ended the campaign with a deficit of $1,733. He owns a service station and a car wash in Arcadia.

Hubert V. Melton, a deputy county sheriff, spent all of the $235 in campaign contributions he received.

While the bulk of contributions to Saelid and Gilb were in the $50 to $100 range, Pellegrino and Fasching each received sizeable donations from the Arcadia Police Relief Association, the police union. The group contributed $4,000 to Pellegrino and $500 to Fasching.

John MacDonald, a city police sergeant and vice president of the Police Relief Association, said that union representatives interviewed most of the council candidates before making the contributions. MacDonald added that the association has endorsed municipal election candidates for the past six years.

Although Saelid received a non-monetary endorsement from the association four years ago, he said he fell out of favor with the group when, as mayor, he opposed a police retirement plan proposal.

Among the $100 contributors to Gilb was Peter Pitchess, Los Angeles County sheriff. Pitchess also was a member of Gilb's nominating committee. Gilb, who owns a wholesale produce business, also received $100 contributions from other produce industry owners.

Environmentalist Johanna Hofer and 21-year-old Robert Humble, who finished seventh and eighth respectively in the balloting, reported that they received no campaign contributions.

The three successful candidates, Saelid, Gilb and Pellegrino, spent heavily on pamphlet statements and newspaper advertisements. One of Pellegrino's largest campaign expenditures was an outlay of $1,371 for T-shirts, while Gilb spent $2,041 on a party for his campaign supporters.

Charles Gilb praises Arcadia Police Dept.

"Arcadia is one of the most respected cities in the greater Los Angeles area," city councilman Charles E. Gilb told residents who gathered at the Robert Herron home recently to talk with the candidate.

Gilb, former Arcadia mayor, is seeking a second four-year term as a councilman. He is one of two incumbents in a field of nine candidates whose names appear on the April 11 ballot.

"Four years ago when I came on the council, traffic and street safety were big issues. Today our police department is among the best equipped and most efficient anywhere," Gilb said.

The same is true of the fire department, according to the councilman. "We recently received more than 300 applications for three openings," he said, and cited a "promotion through the ranks when possible" procedure begun four years ago as a terrific morale booster within the department.

Gilb described the new city manager, Lyle Alberg, hired by the council following a national search, as a "fine, capable man."

"This is a community of great people, very supportive of their city. In turn, the council strives to provide an efficient and sensitive response to local needs in as economic a manner as possible," Gilb remarked.

According to Gilb, it's not always easy. A council member finds there is a meeting to attend almost every night, and subjects such as redevelopment, Marquee West, downtown parking, employer-employee bargaining, open parties, zoning, keep him on the go.

"But I'm grateful for the past four years and am anxious to continue to meet the issues squarely in a second term," the councilman stated.

"A council member's job is one of teamwork," he stressed. "Each member adds an important dimension. I feel that my successful experiences as a businessman and employer of 1200 people is extremely helpful."

Gilb is the president of a produce and trucking business. He and his family have lived in Arcadia for 19 years.

DONATION — Dan Querrey, president of the Chariots Car Club, left, and Roger Johnson, Police Explorer captain, right, present a check for $189.50 to Arcadia Councilman Charles E. Gilb, chairman of the Arcadia Auditorium Foundation. The groups earned the money by parking cars in the Edwards Theatre lot during the racing season.

The predictions that Pellegrino and Kuyper would run a close race was also borne out by the results.

None of the other five candidates was ever really in the race. George Fasching came closest to making a dent with 1,849 votes. He said he had learned a lot in this election and might consider running again another year.

Jerry Melton, the deputy sheriff with 13 children, came in sixth with 922 votes. Trailing behind were Johanna Hofer with 600 and Robert Humble, the 21-year-old candidate, with 410.

With 27,477 registered voters in the city, a total of 8,756 persons voted, or 31.9 percent, just about what City Clerk Christine Van Maanen had predicted.

Mayor Saelid, in a prepared statement, said he was very pleased at the confidence shown in his service to the city. "I will continue to do my best to represent all areas of our community, residential and business," he said.

Saelid had been considered the candidate of the residential community, not necessarily attuned to local business interests. However he said Wednesday he had found that redevelopment was not the burning issue it was four years ago.

"I found that people were concerned about buying land and selling it at a lower price," he said, "but the city purchase of land was not a concern." He believes people realize the council moves cautiously in redevelopment

Pellegrino Wednesday morning was still shaking his head about the closeness of his victory over Kuyper. He surmised that he won because of his campaign structure and the number of people he and his committee reached.

He, himself, appeared at 43 coffee hours and 72 people walked the precincts, particularly in the south part of Arcadia, on Sunday.

"It was low-key pressure," he commented. "I asked people to give me one of their votes, but said the important thing was to vote."

He said his committee also registered voters including senior citizens and businessmen who had been in town for several years but had never bothered to vote.

"The people behind me won for me," he said, praising his campaign committee.

Looking to the future, he believes that as a council member he can improve communications between the residents and the council. "My election proved that people can do what they want if they get together," he said.

Uppermost in his mind at the moment because of his many conversations with senior citizens is the need to upgrade Dial-A-Ride or even to provide mini-bus service for the community.

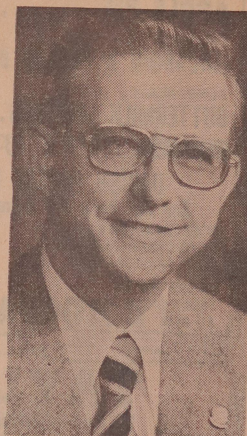

Jarvis-Gann will help us decide whether to have one bus or nine," he said.

Pellegrino sweep election

Close winners race; others never mustered enough steam

By HELEN O. SCHRADER

Editor

There was one big surprise in the Arcadia municipal election Tuesday which saw incumbents Jack Saelid and Charles Gilb returned for four-year terms and Don Pellegrino as the new face on Arcadia City Council.

The surprise, in the eyes of most campaign watchers, was that Saelid outpolled Gilb, whom everyone considered the front runner. The margin was less than 200 votes, with Saelid having 5,765 votes and Gilb, 5,577. Saelid gave credit to more than 50 supporters who walked precincts for him. He and his wife also did some door-to-door campaigning.

The drama Tuesday night as the votes were tallied at City Hall was in the race between Pellegrino and Bill Kuyper. Pellegrino edged out Kuyper by only 53 votes.

Pellegrino ran slightly ahead all evening and although Kuyper ran ahead of him in absentee ballots, which were counted last, it wasn't enough. The final tally showed Pellegrino with 4,053 votes to Kuyper's 4,000.

Kuyper said Wednesday a number of people had suggested he ask for a recount, but that he doubted if he would do so. He said he has until three days after the next council meeting to make up his mind.

Factually, Pellegrino and Kuyper were battling for the seat being vacated by Councilwoman Floretta Lauber, because Saelid and Gilb were considered sure to win reelection. The votes they gathered attested to that confidence.

and that the city has accepted no state or federal funds for redevelopment.

Saelid commented, "The size of my win should not be interpreted as a repudiation of our police and fire personnel who I considered to be a very fine group of people, but rather an endorsement of a fiscally responsible and reasoned approach to employee relations."

He was outspoken throughout the campaign in his belief that with a few adjustments the present retirement plan is satisfactory and the California Highway Patrol plan wanted by the police is too expensive.

Saelid concluded, "I think people have been basically satisfied with our council's performance which gave Councilman Gilb and me and advantage as incumbents. I welcome Mr. Pellegrino to the council and look forward to four very challenging years of service to Arcadia."

Gilb's statement was much briefer. He said, "The people of Arcadia are most generous in giving me opportunity to serve four more years. I accept the responsibility with a deep feeling of love for this great city and all its people."

He said he would like to give special thanks to his reelection committee, his wife and family "and all of those who gave of their time and talent to make this possible, especially the people who voted for me. I will do my best to measure up to their confidence."

The drama Tuesday night as the votes were tallied at City Hall was in the race between Pellegrino and Bill Kuyper. Pellegrino edged out Kuyper by only 53 votes.

Pellegrino ran slightly ahead all evening and although Kuyper ran ahead of him in absentee ballots, which were counted last, it wasn't enough. The final tally showed Pellegrino with 4,053 votes to Kuyper's 4,000.

Kuyper said Wednesday a number of people had suggested he ask for a recount, but that he doubted if he would do so. He said he has until three days after the next council meeting to make up his mind.

Factually, Pellegrino and Kuyper were battling for the seat being vacated by Councilwoman Fioretta Lauber, because Saelid and Gilb were considered sure to win reelection. The votes they gathered attested to that confidence.

The predictions that Pellegrino and Kuyper would run a close race was also borne out by the results.

None of the other five candidates was ever really in the race. George Fasching came closest to making a dent with 1,849 votes. He said he had learned a lot in this election and might consider running again another year.

Jerry Melton, the deputy sheriff with 13 children, came in sixth with 922 votes. Trailing behind were Johanna Hofer with 600 and Robert Humble, the 21-year-old candidate, with 410.

With 27,477 registered voters in the city, a total of 8,756 persons voted, or 31.9 percent, just about what City Clerk Christine Van Maanen had predicted.

Mayor Saelid, in a prepared statement, said he was very pleased at the confidence shown in his service to the city. "I will continue to do my best to represent all areas of our community, residential and business," he said.

Saelid had been considered the candidate of the residential community, not necessarily attuned to local business interests. However he said Wednesday he had found that redevelopment was not the burning issue it was four years ago.

"I found that people were concerned about buying land and selling it at a lower price," he said, "but the city purchase of land was not a concern." He believes people realize the council moves cautiously in redevelopment and that the city has accepted no state or federal funds for redevelopment.

Saelid commented, "The size of my win should not be interpreted as a repudiation of our police and fire personnel who I considered to be a very fine group of people, but rather an endorsement of a fiscally responsible and reasoned approach to employee relations."

He was outspoken throughout the campaign in his belief that with a few adjustments the present retirement plan is satisfactory and the California Highway Patrol plan wanted by the police is too expensive.

Saelid concluded, "I think people have been basically satisfied with our council's performance which gave Councilman Gilb and me an advantage as incumbents. I welcome Mr. Pellegrino to the council and look forward to four very challenging years of service to Arcadia."

Gilb's statement was much briefer. He said, "The people of Arcadia are most generous in giving me opportunity to serve four more years. I accept the responsibility with a deep feeling of love for this great city and all its people."

He said he would like to give special thanks to his reelection committee, his wife and family and all of those who gave of their time and talent to make this possible, especially the people who voted for me. I will do my best to measure up to their confidence."

Pellegrino Wednesday morning was still shaking his head about the closeness of his victory over Kuyper. He surmised that he won because of his campaign structure and the number of people he and his committee reached.

He, himself, appeared at 43 coffee hours and 72 people walked the precincts, particularly in the south part of Arcadia, on Sunday.

"It was low-key pressure," he commented. "I asked people to give me one of their votes, but said the important thing was to vote."

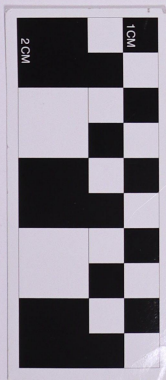

He said his committee also registered voters including senior citizens and businessmen who had been in town for several years but had never bothered to vote.

"The people behind me won for me," he said, praising his campaign committee.

Looking to the future, he believes that as a council member he can improve communications between the residents and the council. "My election proved that people can do what they want if they get together," he said.

Uppermost in his mind at the moment because of his many conversations with senior citizens is the need to upgrade Dial-A-Ride or even to provide mini-bus service for the community.

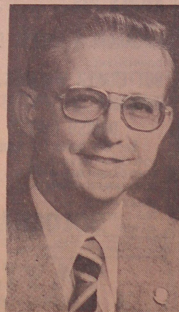

Jarvis-Gann will help us decide whether to have one bus or nine," he said.

Charles Gilb praises Arcadia Police Dept.

"Arcadia is one of the most respected cities in the greater Los Angeles area," city councilman Charles E. Gilb told residents who gathered at the Robert Herron home recently to talk with the candidate.

Gilb, former Arcadia mayor, is seeking a second four-year term as a councilman. He is one of two incumbents in a field of nine candidates whose names appear on the April 11 ballot.

"Four years ago when I came on the council, traffic and street safety were big issues. Today our police department is among the best equipped and most efficient anywhere," Gilb said.

The same is true of the fire department, according to the councilman. "We recently received more than 300 applications for three openings," he said, and cited a "promotion through the ranks when possible" procedure begun four years ago as a terrific morale booster within the department.

Gilb described the new city manager, Lyle Alberg, hired by the council following a national search, as a "fine, capable man."

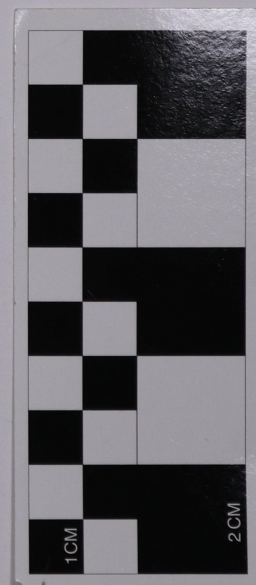

"This is a community of great people, very supportive of their city. In turn, the council strives to provide an efficient and sensitive response to local needs in as economic a manner as possible," Gilb remarked.

According to Gilb, it's not always easy. A council member finds there is a meeting to attend almost every night, and subjects such as redevelopment, Marquee West, downtown parking, employer-employee bargaining, open parties, zoning, keep him on the go.

"But I'm grateful for the past four years and am anxious to continue to meet the issues squarely in a second term," the councilman stated.

"A council member's job is one of teamwork," he stressed. "Each member adds an important dimension. I feel that my successful experiences as a businessman and employer of 1200 people is extremely helpful."

Gilb is the president of a produce and trucking business. He and his family have lived in Arcadia for 19 years.

Crowded election grinds to a close

If money's helpful, Gilb has the edge

It isn't always true that the political candidate who spends the most money is automatically elected. It is true, though, that money helps.

In that case, Arcadia City Council incumbent Charles Gilb has had far more help than any of the other eight candidates in the race.

All candidates are required to file three statements of campaign receipts and expenditures with the city clerk. Two of these are now on file, the second one dated the end of March. The third one won't be due until the middle of June, long after the April 11 election is history.

Candidates who spend no more than $200 total are not required to file itemized statements. Four of the candidates, Charles Chivetta, Johanna Hofer, Robert Humble and Jerry Melton fall in this category.

Gilb has raised far and away the biggest war chest with $12,858.17 contributed to date. Candidates are required to list the names only of people who contribute $50 or more. Gilb lists numerous $50 and $100 contributions by local supporters. In addition he has received tremendous financial support from people in the produce industry.

As of March 27, his committee had spent only $4,353.27. Gilb says funds not expended will be contributed to a charitable cause, probably the non-profit Arcadia Auditorium Foundation of which he is chairman.

If contributions to Gilb's campaign were not so generous, the contributions to Mayor Jack Saelid's fund would look very respectable. His supporters to date have raised $4,095.92, of which $227.04 was in non-monetary contributions. His expenditures so far have been only $1,257.75.

As in the election race itself, Don Pellegrino and Bill Kuyper are running neck and neck in the amount of the contributions they have received.

Kuyper had received $2,336 and had spent, as of the end of March, only $627.07. In the same period Pellegrino had received $2,319.35 and had spent $2,319.35.

When the June accounting comes around, Pellegrino will undoubtedly have added considerably to this statement of contributions. He has relied heavily on advertisements paid for by his supporters. Because the cost is under the $50 limit, they will be accounted for in the final totals.

The only other candidate whose contributions and expenditures have been over the $200 limit is George Fasching. His statement of March 27 shows contributions received of $524 and outstanding debts of $539.48.

Name recognition may decide winners

By HELEN O. SCHRADER

With few issues to catch the fancy of the voters, the City Council race in Arcadia has boiled down to a battle of personalities and publicity.

The nine candidates for three positions on the council can, at this point, be divided into two groups — those who have a reasonable chance of being elected and those who would require at least a minor miracle.

Two of the candidates, Mayor Jack Saelid and Councilman Charles Gilb, have the advantage of their incumbency. The real race is for the seat being vacated by Councilwoman Marcia Lauber, who has chosen not to run for re-election because of family health problems.

Gilb, who is in the wholesale produce business in Los Angeles, is expected to be a shoo-in. He is probably best known throughout the community of all the candidates. That doesn't prevent him from running scared. He has conducted an intensive campaign with public appearances and with brochures and advertisements.

Saelid may have a little more trouble garnering votes than Gilb. His views against redevelopment are well known, views which are not shared by the majority of candidates this year, and he is thought to favor homeowners over the business community. Saelid is an engineer and an executive with the Xerox company.

Probably the hardest-working of all the candidates, and the one likely to pick up a lot of the marbles, is Don Pellegrino, owner of the First Avenue restaurant which bears his name. He is counting on his local business experience and his ability to listen to carry him to victory.

Running neck and neck with Pellegrino is Bill Kuyper, a civil engineer. Kuyper has based his campaign on his 14 years as a member of the Arcadia Planning Commission. He says this experience has given him an intimate knowledge of land use and zoning problems in the entire city. Although he has been a resident of Arcadia for more than 20 years, in both the north and south parts of town, he probably will have more trouble with name recognition than Pellegrino.

Name recognition could well play a role in the candidacy of George Fasching, who owns a service station and a car wash in Arcadia, both bearing his name. Like Pellegrino, he believes it is time to elect a local businessman to the council. He has conducted a colorful campaign.

Although they wouldn't admit it, the other four candidates probably don't really expect to end up in the winners' circle. However they all say they have enjoyed the race and have learned a great deal from the experience.

Adding spice to the campaign with their comments have been Charles Chivetta and Johanna Hofer.

Chivetta, a planning director with the city of Lakewood, has enjoyed taking potshots at the incumbent and their pet projects. While most of the other candidates favor construction, one way or another, of a civic auditorium, Chivetta says what is really needed is a community service center. He wants to see change, calling the desire to keep Arcadia as it is "convoluted logic."

Mrs. Hofer, who bills herself as a "writer, patriot and environmentalist," for several years has provided the loyal opposition at both school board and council meetings. She would like to see the city develop a solar energy policy and would put redevelopment to a vote of the people.

Jerry Melton, for 14 years a deputy sheriff with Los Angeles County, is a comparative newcomer to Arcadia. He and his family, which includes 13 children, moved to the city three and a half years ago because they wanted to live in a community with high standards and good schools. As a fairly new resident, he will have trouble with name recognition, but he is anxious to serve the community in some fashion.

Robert Humble, at 21, is by far the youngest candidate. A student at Cal Poly Pomona, he calls the council race "a great learning experience" for him. He has done a little door-to-door campaigning but between school and a job, he hasn't had much time. He claims the traits needed by a council member are creativity and the ability to think problems through. These traits he says he has.

The election is Tuesday and City Clerk Christine Van Maanen said she would go out on a limb and guess that there would be a 30 per cent turnout of the 27,477 registered voters in the city.

There are 20 consolidated precincts and she suggests voters check their sample ballots for their polling places because they are not all in the usual locations.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. Votes will be tallied at the City Hall, 240 W. Huntington Drive.

Charles Gilb hosted a personal luncheon at the San Gabriel Country Club to express his appreciation to those who were instrumental in some capacity in making the Jog-A-Walk-A-Torium a success. He presented each guest with an Apache key ring as a memento of the event. In expressing his thanks to the group Gilb said it was a fantastic community effort and "I thank all those who participated, 800 runners and 1800 sponsors." He also told the group that more than 71 thousand dollars was realized from the event for the auditorium. In addition he said that Santa Anita would add 10 per cent to that amount. He spoke of the next fund-raising event which will be a black tie musical on May 3 at opening night of the high school's musical, "Fiddler on the Roof" at the San Gabriel Civic. Al Coke and Steve Lloyd are co-chairmen.

Gilb proudly displayed his Jolly Green Award given to him on March 21 by the AHS Music Club. This was in appreciation of his assistance in supplying food for the annual spaghetti supper.

School board

The Arcadia Board of Education, meeting Monday night, a week earlier than usual, has scheduled a public hearing on the initial contract proposals presented by the teachers at the last meeting. The proposals included a 21.8 percent pay raise.

Following a request from board members, recommended guidelines will be presented covering the use of gifts for athletic and other programs.

The board will hear an informational report on a proposal for summer school to be conducted by the University of LaVerne, the Arcadia Recreation Department and the Music Club.

Robert Noble, student representative to the board, will present a recommendation for minimum days.

Parking permits

Beginning immediately, it will be necessary to contact the Arcadia Police Department in person at 250 W. Huntington Drive to secure a temporary overnight parking permit. Applicants are requested to have a description of the vehicle, including the license number, when they apply for the permit.

Police department spokesmen say they deeply regret the cancellation of the issuance of permits by telephone, but due to the increased number of requests coupled with a large number of improper requests, this new program had to be initiated.

Complete information on how to obtain this permit can be obtained by calling the Arcadia Police Department business phone, 447-2121.

Gilb re-elected

The Los Angeles County City Selection Committee has re-elected Arcadia Councilman Charles E. Gilb to a two-year term as chairman. Councilman Wilfred L. Simendinger of the city of La Mirada was re-elected as vice chairman.

These include such agencies as the Local Agency Formation Commission, the Southern California Rapid Transit District and the Los Angeles County Transportation Commission.

DIAL-A-RIDE STOPS AT FASHION PARK

The City of Arcadia and the Santa Anita Fashion Park Management are trying to ease the confusion Dial-A-Ride users have had in the past at Fashion Park. The numerous entrances to the Mall have caused problems with the Dial-A-Ride cabs arriving at the wrong pick-up point.

To help alleviate this problem, three clearly marked Dial-A-Ride stops have been posted at main entrances to both levels of the Mall. There are two stops on the upper level, one outside the entrance where David Copperfield's Restaurant is located, and the other outside the entrance where the Magic Pan Restaurant is located. There is also a stop on the lower level, at the existing RTD bus stop between Robinsons and J. C. Penneys. The location of these stops will be shown on the mall directories inside Fashion Park at each entrance.

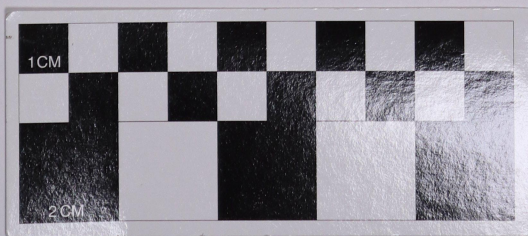

If you need any additional information about these Dial-A-Ride stops, please call Dial-A-Ride at 445-2211.

At the Annual Meeting held in Santa Barbara on November 2, 1979, the officers and Executive Committee members for the coming Association year of 1980 were unanimously elected. Those elected to the Association's top four offices are shown in the above photos. Not shown are Mayor Kenneth J. Miller of Downey who was elected Secretary and Mayor E. Daniel Remy of Burbank who was elected to the position of Treasurer. A complete listing of all officers and Executive Committee members who will serve the Association in 1980 is shown on the second page of this NEWSLETTER.

Following his election at the business meeting, President-Elect Stephen Nordeck discussed the Association's objectives for 1980 as they had been earlier considered at meetings of the Executive Committee. He followed these comments by presenting the four personal goals that he had developed for achievement during his term as President.

These are:

1. To concentrate our lobbying and legislative program on Los Angeles County issues as they relate to our member cities.
2. To work closely and in coordination with the Los Angeles County Division of the League of California Cities and the Legislative staffs of Los Angeles and Long Beach on State issues and legislation.
3. To improve and expand upon a working relationship with the California Contract Cities Association on projects of mutual interest and benefits.
4. To develop a program to restore the positive image of our local government and elected officials to the respected level they deserve.

President-Elect Nordeck concluded his remarks by emphasizing that our Association can only be as effective as its members want and work for it to be. He predicted a successful year ahead for the Association through aggressive efforts of its elected leaders and the active participation and support of all of its member cities.

Gilb opens organized bid for Arcadia City Council

Edward Butterworth, former Arcadia mayor, helped kick off the campaign of Charles E. Gilb for Arcadia City Council by hosting friends and neighbors at his home recently.

Gilb welcomed supporters and spoke about the importance of studying the qualifications of city council candidates.

The problem of increased traffic on the streets, to say nothing of the potential problems caused by increased small airplane traffic at El Monte Airport during the Olympics, must be studied and regulated to insure the safety of local residents, Gilb said.

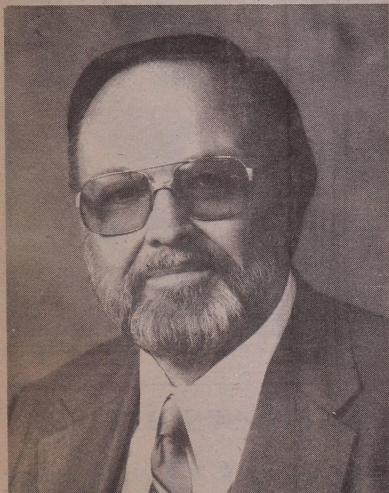

Other issues he addresses during the campaign include redevelopment, senior citizen housing, safety in the streets, cable TV, use of illegal substances and the charter amendment which would require candidates to receive a majority of the votes in a municipal election or face a run-off election.

Jack Saelid, former Arcadia City Councilman who served with Gilb from 1974 through 1982, also serves as the candidates' campaign manager.

"The City of Arcadia at this time faces decisions which will affect its direction for many years to come", Saelid said. "There is no substitute for experience when we consider our candidates."

"As a former mayor and member of the council, Charles Gilb not only has the strength of experience needed for a seat on the city council, but he has proven himself dedicated to the well-being of our city by his many years of community service. He is clearly the best qualified candidate to run for this office in many years and deserves our support," said Saelid as he helped launch the Gilb campaign.

Red Cross chapter celebrates in style

The Arcadia Chapter of the American Red Cross held its 10th-annual Christmas open house at the Hacienda Drive home of Joyce and Bill Stroud in Arcadia. The Stroud home, one of the four homes featured in the Methodist Hospital Auxiliary Holiday of Homes tour, was festively decorated for the season. "It was very festive and they (the Strouds) were very gracious hosts," said Jim Parker, executive director of the Arcadia Red Cross.

Joyce Suess coordinated the event and welcomed more than 250 members of the Red Cross and guests to the open house. "It was a wonderful turn out, in spite of the rain," said Parker.

Those attending included State Sen. Newton Russell, Superintendent Terry Townner of Arcadia Unified School District, President Fred Meyer of Methodist Hospital, Ray Rogers and Art Hershey from Santa Anita Park, and Paul Jochenk, former chairman of the board of Methodist Hospital.

Among the City Hall contingent dropping in to celebrate the holiday season were Bob and Patsy Harbicht, Mary and Dick Young, and George and Geri Fasching. School board member James Bryant and wife Marilyn (active in Parent Alert), also were there, as was Richie Mauck from the Arcadia Police Department.

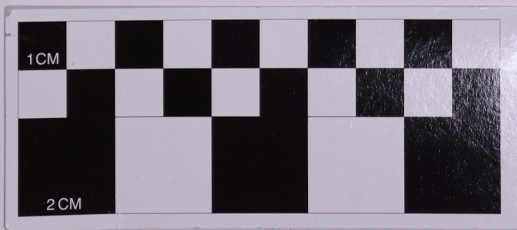

Red Cross board members, both current and past, included Richard Hunter, Perry and Jean Cope, current chairman of the Red Cross Jim Dunbar. Also, Jim and Mary Harvey, Bob and Marcella Whitmore (she heads the California Federation of Republican Women), Kel Mason, director of the Arcadia Chamber of Commerce, and Former Mayor Jim Helms and wife Georgianna.

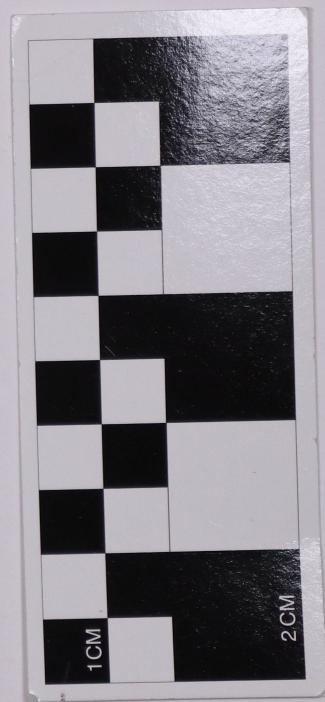

Karen Ayres of Arcadia won the drawing for the living wreath designed and donated by Jerry Palmer of Jerry Palmer Gallery Florists.

'War' between City Council members not without precedent

By HELEN O. SCHRADER
Editor

War between members of the Arcadia City Council is not without precedent. Within recent memory Jim Helms and Ed Butterworth were not above playing other council members with often-times colorful invective.

The currently constituted council is no different. In April in a surprise upset, two new councilmen, Jeff Dring and Dick Haltom were selected and they had hopes of turning the local world around.

It hasn't quite happened that way. On matters that they consider important they often find the vote is stacked 3-2 against them. They have won some major victories. Shortly after their election, the entire council voted to rescind the city's street-sweeping tax and lowered the utility tax from 7 to 5 percent. Whether they can take credit or whether the senior council members had these tax cuts in mind anyhow is a moot point.

In any case, since the two new members were seated, the council has been in ferment, with Dring and Haltom asking searching questions that often have brought on hot retorts from other members.

Last Tuesday night was no exception.

At the end of a lengthy council meeting, with the hour approaching midnight, members decided to make commission appointments. There were a lot of them, because the terms of many commissioners were expiring and there had been two resignations.

The resignations, of Dave Paradis from the Sister City Commission and Catherine Mundy from the Arcadia Beautiful Commission, were accepted with little comment.

Councilman Jack Saelid's nomination of Robert T. Knight to the Personnel Board was approved unanimously. So was the reappointment of Bernard Silver.

Then came the Planning Commission on which Joe Sargis had served a four-year term. He was up for the normal reappointment. Haltom nominated James M. Green, and Dring seconded the nomination.

Councilman Charles Gilb nominated Sargis for a second term and Saelid seconded the nomination. Saelid said, "I don't know Green but we have Sargis, who is a regular contributor to the commission."

Dring said, "I support Green, who is well qualified and would bring new blood to the commission as the mayor has suggested."

However Mayor Don Pellegrino responded, "Planning is our most important commission. We need strong individuals. I support Sargis."

Sargis was the winner on a split vote. Reason for the split goes back several weeks when Sargis publicly took on Haltom, liaison to the Planning Commission, saying that he was making statements on commission decisions that were based on opinion, not fact. Haltom had retorted that Sargis, too, was talking about opinions.

Ed Harver was reappointed to the Library Board without argument.

Dring nominated Lorraine Fricke to the Arcadia Beautiful Commission with no opposition. His motion, in fact, was seconded by Councilman Charles Gilb.

Gilb then nominated Milton Inbody to replace his wife Pat on the Arcadia Beautiful Commission and Dring seconded the nomination.

Saelid nominated Barbara Marcusson to the Arcadia Beautiful Commission and Gilb nominated Clare Arth and Jack Barnes to second terms on the Sister City Commission. No problems.

Dring met no opposition in his nominations to reappoint John Gaffey, Anita Santo, John Joseph and Mary Young to the Senior Citizen Commissions.

It was a different matter when Gilb nominated Jim Helms, former mayor, to the Parking Place Commission. Helms had had a set-to with one of Dring and Haltom's supporters and they didn't forget it. They voted against him. The vote was 3-2.

Stu Henderson was renominated to the Parking Place Commission without opposition, and Dr. Dennis Lojeski, who resigned to run for council, was reappointed.

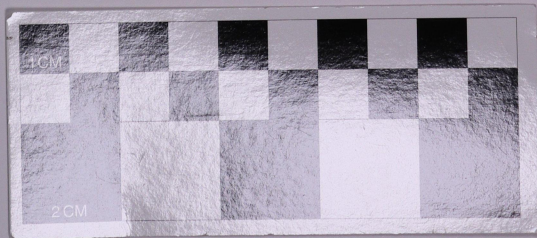

As the session concluded, Dring commented, "The mayor said it would be healthy to have new blood on the Planning Commission and then he voted for Sargis."

Pellegrino replied that Dring was misquoting him.

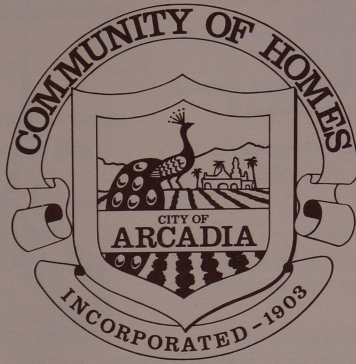

Meanwhile Haltom was angrily throwing papers into his briefcase, claiming that Pellegrino was ignoring him, but still agreeing to the nomination of Lorne Blacklock to the Parking Place Commission.

As the meeting adjourned, Pellegrino made some quiet comment to Haltom, who yelled, "You might at least try to be fair."

Commission appointments are not always a matter of sweet accord.

Charles E. Gilb, Arcadia city councilman, was elected president of the Independent Cities Association of Los Angeles County at a recent meeting of the group in Redondo Beach.

A member of the Arcadia council since 1974, Gilb also serves as vice president of the other area organization of elected officials, the Los Angeles County Division of the League of California Cities.

year. Other new officers selected were: William J. Bogaard, Pasadena council member, secretary; and Eric Schneirsohn, Glendale council member to the post of treasurer.

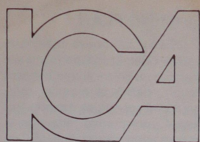

Outgoing officers of the association who were recognized by the group and presented with certificates were former president Stephen A. Nordeck, Manhattan Beach councilman; former president Blake P. Sanborn, Whittier council member and Downey Mayor Kenneth J. Miller.

The six officers of ICA who, together with the 10 members of the Executive Committee, are responsible for conducting the affairs of the Association for the remainder of 1980 are pictured on this page. Several changes in both officers and Executive Committee members from those elected at the Annual Business Meeting last November 2 became necessary due to vacancies resulting from the April 8 city election. ICA President Stephen A. Nordeck, Secretary Kenneth J. Miller, and Executive Committee Member Blake P. Sanborn did not file for re-election to the Councils of their cities. As a result, their services to ICA ended when their terms of office expired in April.

Other developments also occurred which made it necessary for the President, with the approval of the Executive Committee, to appoint new members of the Executive Committee and to advance some present officers and Committee members. New Executive Committee members are Mayor David K. Hayward of Redondo Beach, Council Member Victor A. Lopez of Whittier, Council Member Lyell W. Swearingen of Downey, Council Member Craig H. Walters of La Verne, and Mayor Lee Weinstein of Inglewood.

The end result of these actions is the list of officers and Executive Committee members that appears on the following page. With the leadership that these dedicated individuals are providing, the Association has never been better prepared to aggressively and effectively pursue the objectives for which it was created 20 years ago.

The next regular election of officers and Executive Committee members will take place at the Annual Business Meeting to be held on October 30 in connection with the 20th Annual Seminar in Santa Barbara. Those elected at that time will take office on January 1, 1981 and serve for the calendar year.

term. He was up for the normal reappointment. Haltom nominated James M. Green, and Dring seconded the nomination.

Councilman Charles Gilb nominated Sargis for a second term and Saelid seconded the nomination. Saelid said, "I don't know Green but we have Sargis, who is a regular contributor to the commission."

Dring said, "I support Green, who is well qualified and would bring new blood to the commission as the mayor has suggested."

However Mayor Don Pellegrino responded, "Planning is our most important commission. We need strong individuals. I support Sargis."

Sargis was the winner on a split vote. Reason for the split goes back several weeks when Sargis publicly took on Haltom, liaison to the Planning Commission, saying that he was making statements on commission decisions that were based on opinion, not fact. Haltom had retorted that Sargis, too, was talking about opinions.

At the end of a lengthy council meeting, with the hour approaching midnight, members decided to make commission appointments. There were a lot of them, because the terms of many commissioners were expiring and there had been two resignations.

Ed Harver was reappointed to the Library Board without argument.

Dring nominated Lorraine Fricke to the Arcadia Beautiful Commission with no opposition. His motion, in fact, was seconded by Councilman Charles Gilb.

Gilb then nominated Milton Inbody to replace his wife Pat on the Arcadia Beautiful Commission and Dring seconded the nomination.

Saelid nominated Barbara Marcussou to the Arcadia Beautiful Commission and Gilb nominated Clare Arth and Jack Barnes to second terms on the Sister City Commission. No problems.

Dring met no opposition in his nominations to reappoint John Gaffey, Anita Santo, John Joseph and Mary Young to the Senior Citizen Commissions.

It was a different matter when Gilb nominated Jim Helms, former mayor, to the Parking Place Commission. Helms had had a set-to with one of Dring and Haltom's supporters and they didn't forget it. They voted against him. The vote was 3-2.

Stu Henderson was renominated to the Parking Place Commission without opposition, and Dr. Dennis Lojeski, who resigned to run for council, was reappointed.

As the session concluded, Dring commented, "The mayor said it would be healthy to have new blood on the Planning Commission and then he voted for Sargis."

Pellegrino replied that Dring was misquoting him.

Meanwhile Haltom was angrily throwing papers into his briefcase, claiming that Pellegrino was ignoring him, but still agreeing to the nomination of Lorne Blacklock to the Parking Place Commission.

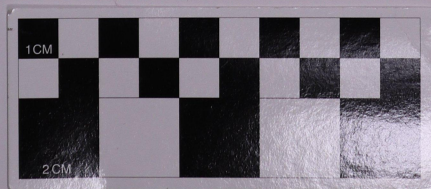

As the meeting adjourned, Pellegrino made some quick comment to Haltom, who yelled, "You might at least be fair."

Commission appointments are not always a matter of sweet accord.

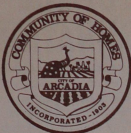

The resignations, of Dave Paradis from the Sister City Commission and Catherine Mundy from the Arcadia Beautiful Commission, were accepted with little comment.

Councilman Jack Saelid's nomination of Robert T. Knight to the Personnel Board was approved unanimously. So was the reappointment of Bernard Silver.

Then came the Planning Commission on which Joe Sargis had served a four-year

20TH ANNUAL SEMINAR PROGRAM PLANS

THE PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

This issue of the ICA NEWS-LETTER is primarily directed to the program of the Association's 20th Annual Seminar. Although the Executive Committee and other Association groups are actively engaged throughout the year on numerous activities for the benefit of our member cities, the Annual Seminar has developed over the years as our most significant and important single event. It commands our interest and our full support.

We have set the goal of conducting a Seminar this year that will surpass the 19 held in the past in informational values and in social pleasures. As the result of the interest and cooperative participation that has been abundantly demonstrated by many people and organizations, we are already assured that this goal will be achieved.

The decision to hold the Seminar again this year at the Santa Barbara Biltmore Hotel was easy to make. It was based on the overwhelming desires expressed by those who attended last year's Seminar at this great hotel to return there this year.

So we have endeavored to repeat much of the interesting and pleasant experiences that were shared a year ago. However, we are convinced that the Seminar this year will be even better.

CHARLES E. GILB, PRESIDENT

Announcements have been widely distributed for the 20th Annual Seminar to be held again this year at the Santa Barbara Biltmore Hotel on October 29-30 and November 1-2. Each announcement consists of an invitation from President Charles E. Gilb, a Seminar Registration Form, a form for use in making hotel room reservations, an entry blank for the Golf Tournament, and a reservation form for Guests Day activities. All persons planning to attend the Seminar are urged to complete and transmit the forms prior to the deadline dates that are shown.

The Seminar will begin with the Golf Tournament on Thursday, October 30, with starting times beginning at 11:00 a.m. at the Montecito Country Club and ending with the awarding of nine trophies and several prizes at a special social affair beginning at 6:00 p.m. A total of 38 enthusiastic golfers participated in last year's Tournament and the outlook is for a greater number this year. Councilman E.L. Morris of Lynwood is the Golf Tournament Chairman.

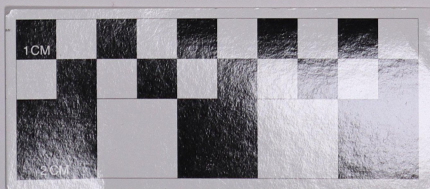

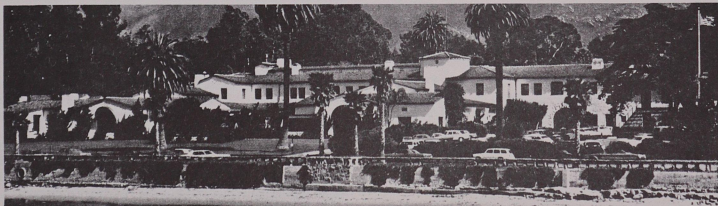

The opening session of the Seminar is scheduled for 1:30 o'clock on Friday afternoon at which all Seminar attendees including guests are urged to be present. The greetings to be extended and the remarks to be made by the distinguished speakers will set the friendly and meaningful tone for the entire Seminar.

Two sessions will follow in the afternoon. The first will be concerned with current activities of related organizations with consideration given to expanded cooperative relationships. Top representatives of five organizations have been invited to make presentations. Clarence H. Knechtel, Chairman of the ICA Organizations Relations Committee, will preside.

The second session will be the Annual Business Meeting at which officers for 1981 will be elected and the highlights of 1980 will be reported by President Gilb.

On Friday evening from 6:00 to 8:00 o'clock, the outstanding Presidents Reception will be held at the Coral Casino, the Hotel's private club. Those who

GOOD TURNOUT ATTENDS CHAPTER CORPORATION'S ANNUAL MEETING

Some three dozen actives and alums took part in the 1980 Annual Meeting of Peters Trust, the house corporation, on April 12, a date which also attracted a large number of Beta parents to the chapter for cocktails and a banquet as a feature of the campus's Parents Weekend.

Secretary Elmer A. Stout '42 noted that 205 written proxies were received.

Presiding at the annual session was W. C. (Skip) Pierce '53, president. Bro. Stout reported that the corporation had, prior to the summer renovation expenditures, the following savings and trust accounts: Furniture Fund — $3,742.37, Kitchen Fund — $2,136.58, and separate savings and checking accounts of $5,716.34, $5,633.33 and $5,980.00. Total of all accounts: $23,299.95.

Two scholarship accounts, established by Gamma Gamma Chapter and maintained by the University of Idaho, include the Lenore Scott Scholarship Fund — $2,250.40, and the Tim Nelson Scholarship Fund — $1,657.02. The Scott Fund has $170.00 and the Nelson Fund has $127.00 available for scholarships to be awarded to active members of Gamma Gamma.

Members attending the meeting approved unanimously a proposal to concentrate this summer's remodeling efforts on the chapter dining room to include new ceiling, wall coverings, floor, draperies and, budget permitting, tables and chairs.

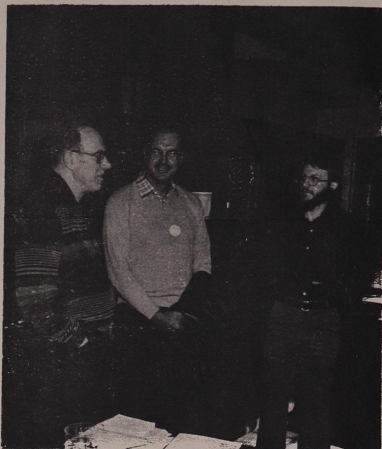

The chapter reported that it has operated in healthy financial condition during the 1979-80 school year and anticipated finishing the year with some $5,000 in excess of expenses. Much of this, the officers noted, was because the house has virtually a full complement of men living in the house, an average of 57, even though the chapter's house bills are second lowest on campus.

In Honor of "A. J."

A subject which attracted considerable interest and enthusiastic discussion was a proposal from Court Smith '49, Idaho Falls, who proposed that "we start an A.J.G. Priest Scholarship Fund for an outstanding Beta pledge, after all he was among the top two or three Betas, and from Gamma Gamma."

Representatives of the Boise Alumni Association suggested that perhaps a room in the chapter house should be dedicated to the memory of the former president of the General Fraternity, possibly the newly remodeled dining room. Others countered that the idea had merit until the room should fall into disrepair.

Don Modie '31 noted that the scholarship idea would surely have found favor with A. J. since he was an ardent supporter of academic excellence. Subsequently, Bro. Modie offered a compromise, suggesting that Gamma Gamma establish a "Hall of Fame" for Idaho Betas of Distinction.

Those attending liked the proposal, and President Skip Pierce appointed a committee to examine the idea and recommend a procedure for defining and initiating the "Hall of Fame" in 1981. Appointed to the committee were: Eric Hovey, Court Smith, Jeff Messenbrink, Steve Bell, Gary Gage, Jack Little and Chuck Gilb.

Betas also were reminded that the two chapter chairs in the living room were restored recently by Thurlyn H. Shrontz '21, Boise.

Just a note to express my gratitude for your commitment to my campaign.

Your generosity in contributing to the California Republican Victory Fund was instrumental in providing phone banks, brochures, bumper strips and a host of other campaign material for our effort in California.

Without this support, I'm sure we just couldn't have done the job.

So again, thanks from the bottom of my heart for your generosity, hard work and sacrifice.

Dear Mr. Gilb:

I wanted to write you now, at this very special time of Thanksgiving, to tell you how grateful I am for everything you have done for our Committee.

No Party has ever had a more loyal or more dedicated friend than you, Mr. Gilb.

In the four years I've served as Chairman, I've watched our Party regain its strength, its confidence and its purpose. And I know you share my great joy that Governor Reagan and our Republican candidates have just won a decisive and historic victory for our country.

I deeply believe that you are the one who deserves a good share of the credit.

I know I have written to you many times asking for your help. And whenever you could, you gave and gave generously. For that and more, every one of our candidates owes you a special debt of gratitude.

As you celebrate Thanksgiving with your family and friends, as I will with mine, I'm sure each of us has many things for which we are grateful.

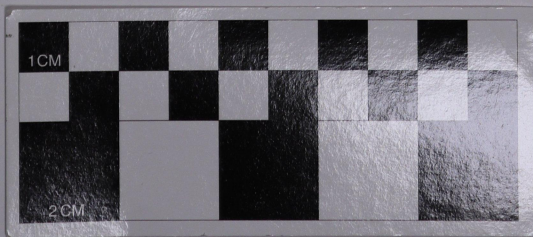

But I hold your support of our Party and your friendship as a very special blessing.

Our country is about to walk a freer, more secure road, and you have helped put us on this new path. May God grant you the blessings you so richly deserve.

Very truly yours,

Gilb begins term as president of local unit of league of cities

By SHEILA THOMPSON
People Editor

Calling for greater cooperation among the 81 cities of Los Angeles County, Arcadia Councilman Charles Gilb began his new term of office as president of the Los Angeles County Division of the League of California Cities.

The former Arcadia mayor was installed by Pasadena City Director Don Yokaitis before an overflow crowd at a dinner meeting in the Clubhouse at Santa Anita Race Track.

Gilb stressed the areas in which he believed city cooperation in the league's action could be most effective, including crime prevention, clean air, transportation and water problems.

"All of us are very pleased to see three county supervisors here tonight," Gilb said. "We need all the cooperation we can get from the county, so."

Installed with Gilb were Wilfred L. Simendinger of La Mirada, first vice president; Robert Bartlett of Monrovia, second vice president; Nell Mirels of Rolling Hills Estates, treasurer, and Don Yokaitis, state director, who was also installing officer. The staff will include Jack O'Neil of the Los Angeles County Division as executive director and Jewell High of Arcadia, recording secretary.

Arthur F. Kelly, chairman of the board of Western Airlines, criticized the energy program of the Carter administration for its lack of management and order in his after-dinner speech on "A Master Plan for Transportation."

"I believe that a three-point program will give us the time to implement a new energy program," he said. "The Arabs actually did us a favor with their oil embargo, waking us up to a problem that already existed."

Kelly explained that the first objective should be to bring order to the energy problem by bringing in a uniform plan that would succeed. His specific objection to the current Department of Energy is lack of management.

"One group in government is outstanding in this respect," he went on, "and that is the National Aeronautics and Space Administration. It has and had the proper priorities and most important, public respect."

Kelly suggested an "original" solution to the energy problem — to form a National Energy and Space Administration. "Don't get me wrong — I'm not suggesting any diminution of NASA's space program," he explained. "I just think they have the reputation, experience and sense of priorities to do the job. They mobilized 350,000 people from 20,000 companies to put a man on the moon," he said.

Kelly's second point was to "take the isolationism out of the energy problem." He believes that the United States should cooperate with other countries in research and exploration of new forms of energy such as non-fossil fuels, solar energy, nuclear energy and others. The U.S. can't allow energy to become a political weapon again, he said.

Third, California's reputation as a leader in the scientific field should be used to initiate a new public transportation system for the country. Kelly also is aware that California has a reputation for a lack of public transportation. He pointed out that the individual driving a car with one person in it is "Public Enemy Number One."

Gilb calls for cooperation

But California is used to innovations, he said, and it should be possible to form a new transportation system here. The League of California Cities could be of tremendous help in promoting and accelerating the program.

Tom Frandsen, vice president of KHJ-TV, served as master of ceremonies for the occasion, and guests were introduced by Arcadia Mayor Don Pellegrino. Among the dignitaries attending were Los Angeles County Supervisors Deane Dana, Mike Antonovich and Pete Schabarum, County Assessor Alexander Pope, Undersheriff Sherman Block, Los Angeles City Council Members John Ferraro and Arthur Snyder,

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Strub, Los Angeles Turf Club; Ray Rogers, vice president and general manager of Santa Anita Race Track; past Arcadia mayors Don Hage, Jack Saelid and Jim Helms Jr., plus past presidents of the L.A. County Division Ken Chappell of West Covina, Gil Smith of Carson and Ruth Benell; Bob Farrell of the Los Angeles City Council representing the League of Independent Cities, and Will Simendinger of the Contract Cities Association.

Arcadia council to choose mayor at Tuesday meeting

By HELEN O. SCHRADER
Arcadia Correspondent

It appears certain that Charles Gilb will be elected mayor for the second time Tuesday when the Arcadia City Council holds its annual reorganization session. It is probable, too, that Jack Saelid will be elected mayor pro tem, an office he has also held before.

Whether this will be accomplished on a unanimous vote or whether Councilmen Jeff Dring and Dick Haltom will cast votes against the planned reorganization remains to be seen.

The council terms of both Gilb and Saelid run out a year from now. According to provisions of the city charter, having served two consecutive four-year terms, they cannot run for re-election. The current mayor, Don Pellegrino, whose term also expires, is eligible for re-election.

However, Dring and Haltom may be the senior members of the council a year from now. One of them could be given the training provided by being second in command.

On the other hand, either two or three new persons will take seats on the council next April and it is impossible even to conjecture where the balance of power will be when that happens.

Once reorganization is decided, council members will settle down for six public hearing, including:

— An appeal of a Planning Commission denial of a conditional use permit to add a drive-through facility and expand the freezer area at McDonald's on Foothill Boulevard.

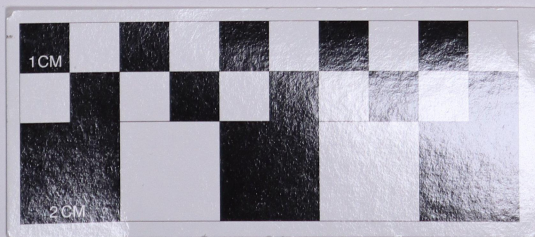

— A street light petition for Eighth Avenue from Norman Avenue to Longden Avenue.

— A Planning Commission resolution recommending approval of an amendment to the Municipal Code authorizing limited improvements to non-conforming single-family dwellings in R-3 zones.

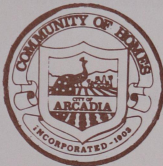

— A street light petition for Camino Real from El Monte Avenue to Santa Anita Avenue.

Gilb named mayor by Arcadia council

By JIM TRANQUADA
Special Correspondent

To no one's surprise, Councilmember Charles Gilb was elected mayor of Arcadia for the second time at the City Council's annual reorganization Tuesday.

Nominated by Councilmember Jack Saelid, Gilb was elected by a unanimous vote of the council, replacing Mayor Don Pellegrino. Saelid was elected mayor pro tem, an office he has held before, but by only a 3-2 vote. Councilmembers Richard Haltom and Jeffrey Dring dissented.

"Despite our differences, Mr. Gilb is not only well qualified for the post, but is well suited for the job," said Dring in moving for a unanimous vote.

Gilb, 56, a Los Angeles businessman, was first elected to the council in 1974. He served his first one-year term as mayor in 1975-76.

The terms of both Gilb and Saelid run out a year from now. According to the city charter, having served two consecutive four-year terms, they cannot run for re-election.

In a public hearing that followed reorganization, the council returned to the city Planning Commission a revised plan for a proposed drive-thru facility and expanded freezer area at the McDonald's Restaurant at 143 E. Foothill Blvd.

The commission had rejected a previous plan, declaring the facility would decrease already inadequate parking space. Owner Steve Frohling appealed, and returned Tuesday with a new plan which would mean the loss of only one current parking space.

He also presented the council with a recent customer survey and a parking utilization study he commissioned to support his case.

He said the survey showed 83 percent of the 1,002 customers surveyed said they would like a drive-thru facility, while the parking study showed that during the peak service period of Friday through Sunday the parking lot was filled to capacity only 3 percent of the time.

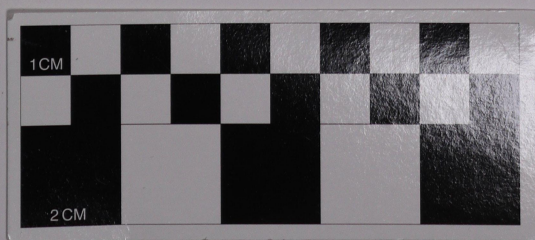

Several residents appeared in front of the council and voiced their support for the plan, emphasizing the convenience, time saved and the safety of young family members.

In other business, the council approved one petition and denied another for new street lighting on two different streets in the city.

A petition with the signatures of 25 property owners requesting installation of street lights on existing power poles on Camino Real between El Monte and Santa Anita avenues was approved unanimously.

But a petition to install new street lights on Eighth Avenue between Norman and Longden avenues was denied after a group of property owners voiced their opposition to the proposal.

Eight of those opposing the new street lights withdrew their names from the original petition. Spokesman Tony Dwyer, an Eighth Avenue resident, told the council that many residents opposed the lighting not because of the cost, but because of the undesirable brightness of the proposed high-pressure sodium street lamps.

Council should name Gilb mayor

It appears certain that Charles Gilb will be elected mayor for the second time as the Arcadia City Council holds its annual reorganization Tuesday night. It is probable, too, that Jack Saelid will be elected mayor pro tem, an office he also has held before.

Whether this will be accomplished on a polite unanimous vote or whether Councilmen Jeff Dring and Dick Haltom will cast a minority vote remains to be seen.

The terms of both Gilb and Saelid run out a year from now. According to provisions of the city charter, having served two consecutive four-year terms, they cannot run for re-election. The current mayor, Don Pellegrino, whose term also expires, is eligible for re-election.

However Dring and Haltom a year from now may be the senior members of the council. It appears logical that one of them should be given the training provided by being second in command.

On the other hand, either two or three new persons will take seats on the council next April and it is impossible even to conjecture where the balance of power will be when that happens.

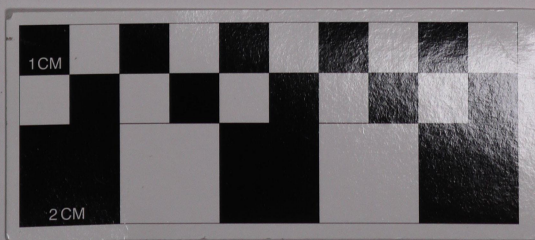

Once reorganization is decided, council members will settle down for six public hearings:

- Appeal from a Planning Commission denial of a conditional use permit to add a drive-through facility and expand the freezer area at McDonald's on Foothill Boulevard.

- A street light petition for Eighth Avenue from Norman Avenue to Longden Avenue.

- A Planning Commission resolution recommending approval of amendment to the municipal code authorizing limited improvements to non-conforming single-family dwellings in R-3 zones.

Charles Bluth takes a seat on his own piece of the rock in front of his house

Bluths open mountaintop mansion for charity event

By SUSAN HOBBS
Special Correspondent

Rumors have been rampant. Outsiders have speculated the majestic mountaintop house in Arcadia belongs to a wealthy, eccentric rock star. Another account holds stone-faced actor Clint Eastwood hangs his hat there.

The castlelike appearance of the rambling 14,000 square foot mansion with 24 rooms and eight baths has fueled the yarn about a moat surrounding the house. Some even say the "king of the castle" leaves for work from a private helicopter pad.

Chuckling to themselves at the hilltop house, developer Charles Bluth, 41, and his wife Cleo are quick to dispel rumors. They are ordinary people who have come to live in an extraordinary place through hard work, ambition and an ordinary series of events.

Bluth had a vision. The design of the house came to the imaginative entrepreneur one day over lunch. From original plans sketched on a cocktail napkin, he's held to the basic concept refining the rooms and views.

After making his fortune wheeling and dealing in business and real estate, Bluth went shopping for a mountain with a panoramic 360 degree view. Leveling some 90 feet off the top, hauling in 610,000 cubic yards of dirt, he created a building site just over two acres.

The road to Peacock Manor winds north of Foothills Junior High School past Whispering Pines Estates, a 24 unit development of custom houses at the base of the mountain. Beyond the private electrically operated wrought iron gate, the driveway winds through an archway under maid's quarters and a guest apartment of one wing of the house, converging on a circular paved drive.

One of the most outstanding features of the house is a 16 foot wide stained glass dome in the entrance hall gained through a pair of stained glass front doors. Created in 33 sections and assembled on site, the design features a pair of brilliant blue peacocks.

The immense hall also showcases a freestanding solid oak staircase that sweeps past a wall of floor to ceiling windows, a two-story crystal chandelier and three century old French antiques.

Planned to maximize the views, rooms throughout the house feature wide expanses of glass. Every piece of window glass is beveled glass. Hand crafted solid oak walls throughout the house complement oak planked floors.

Peacock Manor is 90 percent owner decorated, with the Bluths striving for the warm feeling of rich woods to enhance the French Normandy theme and offset the cavernous dimensions of the house. Living room seating is clustered around a handcarved marble fireplace from England. Overlooking a landscaped pond destined as an aviary, the dining room is cool and serene in powder blue wall coverings and sheer draperies.

In the beginning, Peacock Manor was the impossible dream.

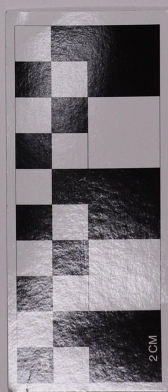

A classic rags to riches story, Bluth's climb up the mountain began in east Los Angeles, one of six children raised by an Austrian garment cutter and his Irish wife. Bluth learned how to hustle early in life.

After a hitch in the Army direct from El Monte High School, he majored in accounting and marketing at Cal State L.A. Bluth sold Armstrong floors three years before joining the sales team of Smith-Corona-Marchand's photocopy division on straight commission. Within 11 months, he ranked third among a sales force of 700 nationwide.

At age 29, living off his wife's salary as an elementary school teacher, he left to open his own business. With $5,000 and a $5,000 loan from a friend, Bluth began leasing coin-operated photocopy machines to college campuses across the country undercutting the standard 10 cent fee by a nickel. The concept was extraordinarily successful and within a year he had cornered the market.

A year later he opened a instant printing outlet and three years later he got his real estate license. Using the money from the photocopy business as a springboard into real estate, Bluth became a major investor in the late 1980s. Later he got his broker's license.

Cleo Bluth and Ruth Gilb plan for Red Cross benefit outside Peacock Manor

Peacock Manor to be site of Red Cross reception

Peacock Manor, the Charles P. Bluth estate at 251 Whispering Pines Summit, Arcadia, will be the site of a reception to benefit the building fund of the Arcadia Chapter, American Red Cross.

Scheduled for Sunday, June 21, from 3 to 7 p.m., the event will offer guests an opportunity to tour the French tudor home and its many gardens, according to Ruth Gilb, benefit chairman.

Entrance to the home is through a 36-foot high, hand-formed arch, designed to befit the motif of the house.

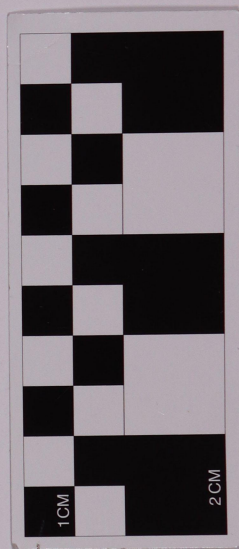

It was molded on site, a project that took over three months to build and an hour and a half to pour.

Since the Bluths have announced that this event will be the only time the hilltop home will be open for a community function, local residents are invited to take advantage of a rare opportunity to view a true mansion, says Mrs. Gilb.

Assisting her are June Fee, invitations; Judy Fickas, refreshments; Marilyn Sargis, guest coordinator; and Jo Ann Scott, publicity.

Donations at $25 per person will be accepted and appreciated, according to Barbara Saelid, who can be reached for more information concerning the benefit by phoning 447-4918.

Arcadia residents form new auxiliary

A group of Arcadia residents formed an ad hoc committee, headed by Carol Libby, in November, 1980, as a prelude to forming a local auxiliary for the Visiting Nurse Association of Pasadena and San Gabriel Valley (VNA).

Subsequent meetings took place in February and May, 1981, and members serving on this committee include: Roni Eventov, Floretta K. Lauber, Jane R. Shepherd, Ruth Gilb, Dorothy K. Dowd, Jean Cope, Marilyn Sargis, Sue Newton, Jill Beley, Carolyn Stuart, Marilyn L. Daleo and Eleanor Johnson.

Alicia Quiroz, executive director, and Bernard Herman, chairman of the board of the VNA, have acted as laissons and were instrumental in the ad hoc committee forming an auxiliary in May after voting on by-laws and officers.

The VNA is a non-profit agency which serves 15 communities in the San Gabriel Valley. It provides professional nursing care and other therapeutic services to the sick in their homes under the medical direction of the patient's physician.

Auxiliary members are currently planning a gourmet brunch scheduled on Sunday, June 28, from 11:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. at the home of Roni Eventov, 55 Woodland Lane, Arcadia.

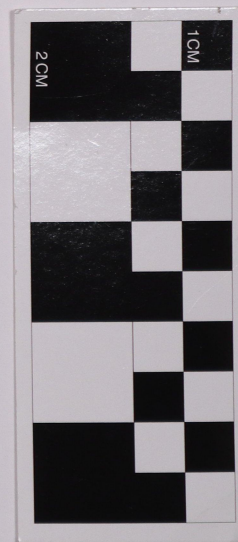

For further information, call the VNA office at 795-7704.

Mayor proclaims Nov. 16-22 Tournament of Roses Week

Mayor Charles Gilb has proclaimed Nov. 16 through Nov. 22 as Arcadia Tournament of Roses Week.

The week will be devoted to giving Arcadians an opportunity to "own a piece of the float" that will be entered in the Pasadena Rose Parade on New Year's Day.

According to chairman Bonnie DeWitt, volunteers next week will canvass residences and businesses for donations. Even small donations will give the donor part ownership in the float. In exchange for a $1 contribution, a donor will receive a decal featuring a red rose and the name of the city plus the statement that "I own a piece of the float." A long-stemmed red rose will be given to anyone who contributes $10.

Each person who contributes has the opportunity to sign his or her name or that of a friend or relative on a Tournament of Roses scroll which will be carried on the Arcadia float on New Year's Day.

Members of the Arcadia Jaycees will deliver containers to local businesses where donations will be accepted.

Contributions may also be mailed to the Arcadia Tournament of Roses Association in care of the Chamber of Commerce. In this case the decal will be mailed to the donor.

Those who choose to visit the chamber office can pick up a decal and sign the scroll.

On Nov. 22 volunteers will spread out through the community seeking donations. Anyone wishing to participate should contact Nancy Hull at the chamber, 447-2159.

Chris McGuire, tournament president, says, "Many people don't realize that Arcadia is one of the few cities which has a float in the Rose Parade, with the cost paid solely through contributions by citizens." Several fund-raising activities are scheduled throughout the year. The week of the float is new this year.

The Arcadia Tournament of Roses Association was formed in 1964 with the first float entered in the 1965 Rose Parade. This year the city will salute the bonds of neighborly friendship through the theme, "Arcadia-Newcastle: Sister Cities."

A stylized Australian tea tree will symbolize the ties of friendship with Arcadia's sister city, Newcastle, New South Wales, Australia. Set amidst the tree blossoms are two gazebo-like tea houses and swings which will hold Arcadia's Rose Queen and her court.

Arcadia's official city bird, the peacock, graces the tree's lower branches, while Australia's famed Koala bear rides on the forward base garden.

Canal issue heard

FROM/C1

Tim Brick, coordinator of the Californians for a Fair Water Policy, which opposes construction of the multimillion-dollar canal, said the state is not running out of water, as pro-canal advocates alleged.

Brick distributed to the mayors and reporters a packet of informational material which noted, "We're not running out of water, we're running out of money."

Mayor Tom Bradley of Los Angeles, Mayor Eunice Sato of Long Beach and Mayor Charles Gilb of Arcadia, who is president of the Los Angeles Division of the League of California Cities, stressed the urgency of "sharing," as Bradley put it, the state's water supplies.

Bradley said that studies by California's last three governors have concluded that the Peripheral Canal "is the most sensible and reasonable solution and the only one that seems feasible at this point."

Conference leaders said that only surplus water may be exported from the north.

The state Department of Water Resources estimated the construction cost of the state act at $2.1 billion in today's dollars and, taking inflation into account, $5.1 billion by the year 2000.

A family of five in Southern California would pay about $10 a year extra for water made available through the canal, according to proponents.

They said funding for the canal would come primarily through revenue bonds and the California Water Fund, which includes tideland oil revenues and specified revenues from State Water Project contractors.

30 mayors assailed on canal issue

By Bob Houser
Staff Writer

Some 30 Los Angeles County mayors were assailed Friday by leaders on both sides of the controversial Peripheral Canal.

Proponents said its failure on next June's state ballot would "drain this region of its life's blood."

But opponents charged that "the (water) crisis was contrived."

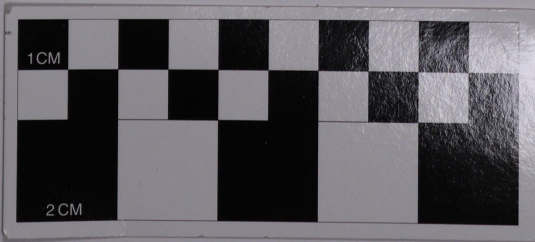

Construction of the 42-mile canal is the principal feature of the State Water Project.

It would be a 400-foot-wide, 30-foot-deep earthen channel, blending with existing channels in the Sacramento-San Joaquin Delta to divert surplus water around the environmentally sensitive delta and into the California Aqueduct to Central and Southern California.

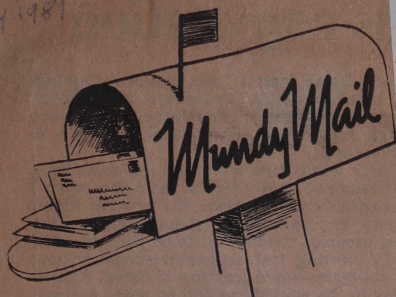

The delta, a maze of waterways and islands, lies at the convergence of the Sacramento and San Joaquin Rivers. The mayors were told Friday that the delicate nature of the delta is threatened by salt intrusion in dry years and by flooding during wet seasons.

Pro-canal spokesmen said the canal is needed to provide Southern California with water from northern surpluses when the Southern California allotment of Colorado River water is reduced by 55 percent in 1985 under a U.S. Supreme Court order returning that water to Arizona.

ARBORETUM EVENTS — I could write reams and reams about the Los Angeles State and County Arboretum located in our own home town, as I have been a devotee of the area even in the days when we called it the "old Rancho." The arboretum is a sanctuary of open space nestled in the foothills of the San Gabriel Mountains, a depository for plants representing both the past, present and future; a historical site rich in California history and a bird sanctuary.

Those are the reasons that our mayor, Charles E. Gilb, after conferring with Francis Ching, arboretum director, and Supervisor Pete Scharbarum, will dedicate the first week in June as Arcadia Arboretum Appreciation Week. The arboretum is for people and the special days are to encourage Arcadians to visit their arboretum and become better acquainted with all it offers. The arboretum is an oasis offering a spot of quietness, beauty and nature — particularly so on early morning walks when you share the stillness and beauty with the hundreds of ducks and peacocks.

Dick Closson, general chairman, urges all Arcadians to attend the two events; a Mixer on June 1, and breakfast for families on Saturday, June 6, from 7 to 9:30 a.m. The Hall of Environmental Education will be the setting for the Mixer. Beverages and cheeses will be served and historical pictures of Arcadia and the arboretum will be on display in the Center.

The focus on June 6 will be families and a continental breakfast will be served adjacent to the historic Hugo Reid Adobe. There will be tram tours of the beautiful and extensive grounds and entertainment by Arcadia High School musicians. Children will also be able to fish in the lagoon on that day until 10 a.m., with bamboo poles and bait provided by the arboretum. One of the attractions of the arboretum is a natural, spring-fed body of water, surrounded by foliage in which the pre-historic and jungle garden is located. Both have been used in numerous motion pictures from the early Tarzan pictures.

Reservations may be made with the Arcadia Chamber of Commerce, 388 W. Huntington Drive, 447-2159, and it is hoped by the committee that they will be made before Friday, May 29. Tickets are $2.50 a person for the Mixer on June 1. Tickets for the breakfast and other activities on June 6 are $2 for adults and $1 for each child. The committee assisting Closson consists of Don Franco, in charge of the breakfast; Dale Morrow, in charge of the Mixer; Rita Lowell, Kel Mason, Betty Masten and Ray Modditt.
